Last week's riddle:

Last week's answer:

The man is struck by a model train running around a train set.

CONSUMER PRICES UP 0.2% FOR JANUARY

Major factors in this increase in the Consumer Price Index include a 0.9% rise in the price of clothing as well as rising rents and healthcare costs. Core CPI also rose 0.2% in January. The annualized inflation rate hit 2.3% last month, yet the Federal Reserve expects but a 1.6% gain in the CPI across 2012. Wholesale inflation ticked up 0.1% for January, with the core Producer Price Index up 0.4%.<sup>1</sup>

RETAIL SALES FALL SHORT OF (HIGH) EXPECTATIONS

The Census Bureau reported a healthy 0.4% rise in U.S. retail purchases for January. However, economists polled by Dow Jones Newswires thought they would rise 0.9% for the month. Subtract a 1.1% decline in auto sales from the data, and retail sales were up 0.7% for January.<sup>2</sup>

LEADING INDICATORS HIT 3½-YEAR PEAK

The Conference Board's Leading Indicator Index rose 0.4% in January, with seven of ten indicators improving. (The most notable positive detected: a widening in the spread between short-term and long-term interest rates.) The index advanced for a fourth consecutive month.<sup>3</sup>

At week's end, the Dow was at 12,949.87, the NASDAQ at 2,951.78 and the S&P at 1,361.23. Oil futures soared 4.63% last week on the NYMEX to settle at $103.24 a barrel Friday.
